PREPARED BY: MANNEPALLI THARUNYA

Executive Summary

Objective

The objective of this teardown is to evaluate Subspace.money from the perspective of a real user and identify high-impact product improvements across GTM, Competitor Analysis, Features & Services, UX, and Potential Collaborations.

Research Approach

To conduct this analysis, I explored:

- Homepage and navigation
- Gift card marketplace
- Product detail pages
- Login flow
- Wallet section
- Chat section
- Cart and checkout flow
- Payment experience

Based on this exploration, I identified five product opportunities that can improve user acquisition, trust, conversion, and retention.

Product Overview

What is Subspace.money?

Subspace.money is a subscription marketplace that enables users to save money on recurring purchases through:

- Shared subscriptions
- Discounted gift cards
- Subscription management
- Expense tracking
- Group finance

Key Strength

The platform combines subscription savings and financial management into a single ecosystem, helping users reduce recurring expenses.

SWOT Analysis

Strengths

- Strong discount-driven value proposition
- Wide variety of subscription brands
- Profitable and bootstrapped business
- AI-powered operations

Weaknesses

- Unclear target audience communication
- Limited trust-building elements
- Savings value not highlighted enough

Opportunities

- Student subscription market
- Local subscription ecosystem
- Strategic partnerships

Threats

- CRED
- Splitwise
- Paytm
- Future subscription marketplaces

Feedback #1 (GTM & ICP)

Observation

The homepage simultaneously promotes:

- Gift Cards
- Shared Subscriptions
- Rentals
- Wallet
- Group Finance

However, the platform does not clearly identify its primary customer segment.

Problem

Students, professionals, and families all receive the same experience.

This weakens positioning and increases cognitive load.

Visitors need to understand:

"Is this product specifically for me?"

within a few seconds.

Feedback #2 — Competitor Analysis

Observed

Subspace displays discounted prices effectively. However, compared to platforms like CRED, the platform does not prominently highlight how much money users have saved over time.

For example:

₹1000 Gift Card → ₹955

but the user is not shown:

"You saved ₹45"

Problem

The core value proposition of Subspace is saving money. When savings are not continuously reinforced, users may not fully appreciate the value generated by the platform.

Introduce savings tracking across the platform:

- Savings on each purchase
- Monthly savings summary
- Lifetime savings dashboard

Expected Impact

- Increased user engagement
- Stronger retention
- Better product differentiation

Priority: P1

Feedback #3 — Features & Services

Observed

The wallet section includes:

- Locked Amount
- Unlocked Amount
- Withdraw
- Send

However, there is no explanation of how these values work.

Problem

For new users, terms such as "Locked Amount" and "Unlocked Amount" may be confusing. Financial products rely heavily on transparency and trust.

Lack of explanation can increase support requests and reduce wallet adoption.

Ship Instead

Introduce a "How Wallet Works" section explaining:

- 1.Adding funds
- 2.Using funds for purchases
- 3.Receiving refunds
- 4.Withdrawing available balance

Include tooltips beside wallet terminology.

Expected Impact

- Improved trust
- Reduced support burden

Feedback #4 — UX

Observed

The platform prominently displays:

"Delivery in Minutes"

along with a physical delivery location.

However, most products on the platform are digital products such as subscriptions and gift cards.

Problem

This creates a mismatch between user expectations and the actual service model.

Users may associate the platform with physical commerce instead of digital access and subscription savings.

Ship Instead

Replace the messaging with:

⚡ Instant Digital Delivery

or

⚡ Access Your Subscription Within Minutes

Expected Impact

- Stronger product positioning
- Reduced confusion
- Better first impression

Priority: P1

Feedback #5 — Potential Collaborations

Observed

The marketplace currently focuses on major national and international brands.

However, Subspace's stated moat highlights being India's first subscription marketplace for local providers.

Problem

This differentiation opportunity is not strongly visible to users.

Competing primarily through major brands makes it difficult to build a unique marketplace identity.

Ship Instead

Partner with:

- Local gyms
- Coaching centers
- Regional OTT platforms
- Newspapers
- EdTech providers

Launch a dedicated Local Subscription Marketplace category.

Expected Impact

- Stronger network effects
- Increased customer retention
- Greater competitive differentiation

Priority: P2

Prioritization Matrix

Feedback	Impact	Effort	Priority
User Segmentation	High	Medium	P1
Savings Visibility	High	Low	P1
Wallet Education	Medium	Low	P2
Digital Delivery Messaging	High	Low	P1
Local Partnerships	High	High	P2

Conclusion

Subspace.money has built a compelling platform around subscription savings and digital commerce. The strongest opportunities lie in clearer user segmentation, stronger communication of savings, improved financial transparency, clearer digital-first positioning, and expansion into local subscription ecosystems.

These improvements can strengthen acquisition, conversion, retention, and long-term competitive advantage while reinforcing the company's existing marketplace moat.
